Once one of the largest and most prosperous cities of medieval Europe, Rouen was the seat of the Exchequer of Normandy in the Middle Ages. It was one of the capitals of the Anglo-Norman dynasties, which ruled both England and large parts of modern France from the eleventh century to the 15th century. It was in Rouen where Joan of Arc was burnt in 1431.

DAY 8 - Full day touring of the D-Day Beaches

Today's itinerary includes :

UTAH Beach - Utah beach where the 4th Division headed by General Barton and Brigadier General Theodore Roosevelt, assistant divisional commander who accompanied the first wave, were beached.

Pont du Hoc - The German battery at La Pointe du Hoc was considered to have been one of the most important targets for the Allies on D-Day. The battery here was strategically positioned halfway between the US landing beaches of Omaha and Utah. Pointe du Hoc was with a 30-m straight cliff face the highest point between these two beaches - silencing the guns here would have been vital for the landing operation's success.

Omaha Beach - Omaha beach where you will have two stops at the location of German gun locations and we will see the guns still there including the deadly 88 mm.

American Cemetery - You will end this day program at the Normandy American Cemetery at Colleville-Sur-Mer, which will be the most significant part of the tour, where almost 10,000 American casualties are at rest.

DAY 9 - Full day touring of the D-Day Beaches

Today's itinerary includes :

Bayeux War Cemetery - The Bayeux War Cemetery is the largest Second World War cemetery of Commonwealth soldiers in France. The cemetery contains 4,648 burials, mostly of the Invasion of Normandy.

Mulberry Harbour at Arromanches - Remains of the artificial harbours invented for the Allied invasion of Normandy can still be seen at sea.

Landing Beaches (Gold Beach, Juno Beach, Sword Beach) - The major D-Day Landings began in the early morning of 6 June. The Allies had divided the 60-mile coastal stretch chosen for the invasion into five sectors, codenamed Sword, Juno, Gold, Omaha and Utah. On the eastern side, British forces were predominant at Sword and Gold, while Canadians led at Juno. Out west at Omaha and Utah, it was American forces who landed. D-Day has come to be seen as a great triumph, but that didn't mean the Allies who landed here didn't encounter tough German resistance and suffer some terrible tragedies from the start.

Pegasus Bridge - The Pegasus Bridge at Bénouville was renamed in honour of the British soldiers who captured it, making the bridge the first objective taken by Allied troops after the Landing in Normandy on June 6, 1944.

DAY 10 - Full day touring to Le Mont St Michel

It has two large towers to defend the entrance to the castle. St. Michael is a surety for freedom and thus this sanctuary also became a symbol of the allied landing in Normandy during the Second World War.
